Workshop: *Navigating Complexities of Power in Collaborations

Collaboration is a fundamental strategy to accomplish a common purpose. It is not an end to itself, but instead a strategy to achieve goals and positive outcomes. This strategy, however, will be ineffective if it does not assess variables such as barriers to community-led participation, structural oppression, and cultural humility. Through this interactive workshop Dr. Becci Akin and Dr. Juliana Carlson from the School of Social Welfare at the University of Kansas, will introduce the Racial Equity in Collaboration survey with suggestions for administering it in your collaborative projects. Presenters will describe the components of the survey and provide example items for each of its main areas as well why they are fundamental to doing racial equity collaborative work. They will also provide tips for determining who should take the survey, how frequently they should take it, and how aggregate data from the survey can be used to support your project's work.

(12-1:30 pm PST)

Webinar: *Hombres Buscando Balance - Working with Wounded Men

This session presented by Maestro Jaime Molina, Mario Ozuna-Sanchez, and Ozzie Cruz, Trainers of La Cultura Cura at National Compadres Network, explores the dimensions and dynamics of wounded men. Focused on what is important to consider when working with men, it will provide an overview of how racism, colonization, racial inequity and generational trauma impacts men and the resultant aspects of substance abuse, mental health, and domestic violence. It will further share culturally based, trauma informed, healing centered approaches that have proven to be successful.
